OUR NEW INITIATIVE

In Spring 2015, the leadership of Clemson University’s Center for Career & Professional Development (CCPD) spent several months working to identify the competencies Clemson graduates’ ought to have prior to beginning their professional careers. After consulting with key faculty and employer partners, nine core competencies emerged from the process.

Jumping ahead to Spring 2017, the CCPD hosted a symposium on how career offices and their campus partners can create initiatives to help students develop the competencies they need to be successful in the workplace. Almost 200 representatives from 60 different schools attended the event, and judging from the feedback received afterwards, attendees were impressed with the progress Clemson has made in integrating competency development throughout campus. In two short years, Clemson has become a leading voice in this conversation.

We are gratified by the willingness of our colleagues across campus to incorporate the Clemson competencies into their curricula, co-curricular activities, and one-on-one interactions with students. We are convinced this will produce more capable graduates who are ready to hit the ground running as soon as they walk through your doors, and we look forward to partnering with you as we encourage students to grow professionally while they’re still in school.
